SAMPLE · FICTIONAL CLIENT BLOG POST OR ARTICLE · $129

5 Signs Your Dog Is Overdue for a Groom

Written for Mt. Lebanon Paws Grooming (fictional) · About 1,000 words · Excerpt, first 350 words

Most dogs don't need a spa day every week. But when grooming slips too long, small problems turn into uncomfortable ones. Here are five signs it's time to book, and what each one means.

1. You can hear them coming

If your dog's nails click on the kitchen floor, they're too long. Long nails change how a dog stands and walks, and over time that can strain their joints. Most dogs need a trim every four to six weeks.

2. Their coat has "felt" spots

Run your hand behind the ears, under the legs and along the belly. Tight, flat clumps are mats. They pull on the skin with every step and can hide redness underneath. Small mats can be brushed out; large ones need a groomer.

3. Bath time doesn't fix the smell

A lingering odor after a bath often points to ears, teeth or skin folds. A groomer cleans the spots home baths miss and can tell you if something looks like it needs a vet's attention.

Continues with: 4. They scratch more than usual · 5. You can't see their eyes · When to call the vet instead · How often to book, by coat type

Built for search

- Search title: 5 Signs Your Dog Needs a Groom | Mt. Lebanon Paws
- Meta description: Clicking nails, mats or a smell that won't wash out? Five signs your dog is overdue for grooming.
- Keywords: dog grooming Mt. Lebanon, signs dog needs grooming
- Internal links: Services, Book now

Every article includes

- Research and fact-checking
- Your voice and brand terms
- A clear call to action
- A suggested social post to share it

This sample uses a fictional business. Names, figures and findings are illustrative; any resemblance to a real business is coincidental. Real reports are built from verified sources, which are cited.